Excerpt from United States Congressional Serial Set, 1888-1889 During the current year there have been 1210 storm signals of all kinds ordered, of which 936, or per cent. Have been verified. This percentage is higher than in 1887, and while this improvement is noted with satisfaction, it is believed that more accurate work is pos sible. The detailed table of signals is in Appendix N o. 2. Until the present year this Service has never attempted to pre dict the force of storms, although such duties are plainly imposed upon it by Joint Resolution of February 9, 1870, under which the Service was organized. The difference in the force of storms is so great and of such importance to the maritime public that a system for this purpose was inaugurated and put in force on September 1, 1887. The signals displayed indicate whether a storm is to be light or severe, and whether the storm-centre is approaching or has passed the station, and, finally, from what quarter the winds are expected. The Service attempts, however, only to predict easterly winds or westerly winds, since a very slight change in the course of a storm makes a wind north east instead of southeast. In order that the general public may have the benefit of an Opinion, which does not rise to the dignity of a predic tion, the indications official in all cases indicates whether the strong winds are expected in the northerly quadrants or southerly quadrants. The publications of this Service clearly set forth that this distinction of quadrants must not be relied upon, but that parties can only count on easterly or westerly winds, as the case may be. In separating winds into easterly or westerly winds, the southerly wind is classed with the easterly winds which occur in the United States in advance of the storms, and the northerly winds with the westerly, because it occurs, as a rule, after the storm-centre has passed.
