Honda Brushcutters have a semi-automatic system that supplies the cutting line feed. When the line starts to wear out, it reduces the cutting performance. So now when this happens, simply tap the head on the floor and more line is released automatically. No need to stop the engine to make the adjustment, as with other machines. We also have a metal line cutter option which lasts much longer ...

The strimmer itself is very good; what one expects from Honda. Good build and good accessories. Pre-built and tested by Radmore & Tucker. Starts first time, every time. A little on the heavy side but the harness helps with that. All in all, very pleased. 5 out of 5. J.E. McMullan (verified owner) - April 10, 2020. Utterly no comparison: the Honda blitzes through growth like a hot knife through butter; the electric strimmer like a feather against a breeze block. If I'd kept using the electric stimmer I'd probably have spent more money on new strimmer cable than the Honda itself, and the Honda feels so solidly built that I'm sure it will last the lifetime of several electric trimmers. So in that respect ...
